Abstract

The Nome Eskimo Community Tribal Council Resource is a digital manual composed of information for newly elected tribal leaders so they can provide the best guidance to the Tribe, develop leadership skills, and serve the community. The purpose of this project is to ensure that current and future tribal council members and presidents have access to information necessary to make decisions on important issues using best practices for governance and leadership. The resource guide includes roles and responsibilities as well as local and statewide resources in various areas of governance including child welfare, land, natural resources, and education. It is intended to provide a starting point for newly elected tribal members. Additionally, Nome Eskimo Community (NEC) bylaws, program information, photos and recorded interviews of current and former tribal leaders will provide newly elected officials with important NEC history. The different subjects contained within the guide are specific to the programs the Council is governing. Leaders have access to the digital resource guide via downloadable files which can be viewed on a tablet.

The resource guide will include the roles and responsibilities of the tribal council and the president and will cover governance, leadership practices, and program resources. The resource guide can be further developed to include advanced information for experienced leaders in the following areas: child welfare, land, natural resources, and education.

Mission Statement

Nome Eskimo Community is a federally recognized tribal government improving the quality of life of those we serve.

Vision

Nome Eskimo Community will be a proud, active, functional, and leading tribal government that provides a broad spectrum of services that benefit our tribal members and community.

AL SAHLIN

This project is dedicated to Alfred Sahlin who fully supported this effort and shared NEC histories willingly without hesitation. His leadership and contributions to the success of NEC has set a standard to be emulated and qualities desired in future leadership. Quyanaqpak!

YOUTH SERVICES

The program's purpose is to increase and enhance activities which will promote education, culture and healthy lifestyles for Alaska Native and tribally-enrolled children and their families. Nome Eskimo Community's programs include:

- Educational Services
- Sports & Recreation
- Cultural Activities
- Juvenile Justice & Prevention Efforts
- Family Support

TRIBAL RESOURCES (ENVIRONMENTAL ACTIVITIES)

The Nome Eskimo Community Tribal Resource Program was created to increase NEC's administrative capacity to start, operate and manage tribal environmental programs.

The NEC Tribal Resources Program studies water, land, air and habitat resources, and establishes partnerships with agencies to address climate change and its effects on Nome area subsistence resources. In addition, the program collects data for the NEC Tribal Council to make proactive decisions, and on the implementation of future projects that impact the environment. The program is funded by an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Indian Governmental Assistance Program (IGAP) grant.

HOUSING

Nome Eskimo Community's Housing Program (NEC Housing) is utilizing Federal dollars from U.S. Housing & Urban Development for our Home Renovation Services.

FAMILY SERVICES

The NEC Family Services Department strives to promote stability, security and wellness of member families. The Family Services Department derives its authority through the NEC Tribal Council, NEC Tribal Court, NEC Children's Codes, and through the Federal Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).

The Department provides confidential advocacy and intervention services on behalf of member children who are in danger of being taken into protective custody by the State of Alaska, or who have already entered protective custody. Family Services also advocates on behalf of immediate and extended member families who are impacted when Protective Services Reports are received by the Alaska Office of Children's Services, and provides traditional approaches to case planning, family support and preservation.
